Backhoe stuck in toll lane

A tractor-trailer picked the wrong lane of the Burlington-Bristol Bridge on Thursday afternoon.

The trailer's cargo, a full-sized backhoe, got stuck in the toll booth hangar when the trailer tried to drive through a narrow lane.

The digger's tracks extended over the side of the trailer and became wedged between the guardrail and the hangar's lane barrier, reports said.

Crews were forced to close the lane for an extended period of time. METRO

Suit Corner fire will cost neighboring businesses

Ripple effect. The landmark store that is now gone created foot traffic, one owner said.

Delvonne Bell will miss the customers carrying the "suit shop" bags.

"We'll miss the foot traffic," she said.

Bell, the owner of Old City Flowers on South Third Street, said she closed at 2 p.m. after the two-alarm fire broke out at the 60-year-old landmark store in Old City on Wednesday morning.

In the wake of the fire, which destroyed the building at the corner of Third and Market streets, Bell said she would feel the effects.

"I would say on a daily basis because a lot of guys come in here with Suit Corner bags," she said. "Might miss one or two days out the week where you don't see any bags."

She would typically see men come through after a shopping spree.

"And on their way back, they usually get something for their girlfriend," she said.

Bell has worked at the shop for three years and said she'd become friendly with the store's workers — and that they've been through a lot together.

"Third Street has been through so much since I've been here," she said. "It was just one thing after another since I've been here.

"It seems like every summer, something is going [on] out there: The street is blocked off, we lose electric, they tore up the street. It's just crazy."

Burnt suits on mannequins still lie in front of Suit Corner.

Christie to deliver address at Rowan

Chris Christie / FILE PHOTO

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie will deliver the keynote address at Rowan University's graduation ceremony in May.

Christie will deliver his address to the undergraduate class of 2014 at the university's Glassboro campus on May 16.

Christie, state Senate President Steve Sweeney and state Sen. Donald Norcross will receive honorary degrees.

In a statement, Rowan University officials acknowledged that all three men were instrumental in the founding of Cooper Medical School in Camden, as well as securing more than $100 million in funding for new construction.

According to NJ.com, a handful of Rowan students protested the governor's appearance at a Mount Laurel town hall meeting in March. Six people, and at least four students, were led from a YMCA for protesting Christie's use of Hurricane Sandy relief aid and his alleged involvement in the Bridgegate scandal.

"I'm not certain that people realize the significance of what these three men have done," said Rowan President Ali Houshmand. METRO

Airport workers rally for a living wage

See more at www.metro.us

Not left behind. Philadelphia subcontractors want the same increase New York workers recently were granted.

Even though a referendum asking voters to raise the minimum wage will be on the May 20 ballot, airport workers continue to call on the city and residents to push the increase forward for a big reason: so they can make a living wage.

On Friday morning, airport workers will once again rally at the Philadelphia International Airport. One of those workers is 29-year-old Sarina Santos, who works full-time as an airport baggage handler. Even though her husband works a good-paying job, she said the couple struggle to pay their bills and raise four kids.

"It doesn't work at all," Santos said of the arrangement. "We don't have any extra money. We can't do what a normal family would do."

Santos, who's been in the position since December, makes $7.25 per hour and admits it hurts when her children, even at the ages of 5, 7, 9 and 13, say they want to go to college.

She calls her pay a "chump check" and it helps to pay their mortgage, utility and car bills.

It's no way to live, said Daisy Cruz, mid-Atlantic district director for 32BJ SEIU. "It's too important to the workers. Too many people live in poverty here in the city of Philadelphia."

The referendum calls for the minimum wage to increase to all city subcontractors to $10.88. The groups Philadelphians Organized to Witness, Empower and Rebuild lobbied City Council to put the referendum on the ballot.

Cruz and Santos are confident the referendum will pass; they are knocking on doors.

"For all the work I do," Santos said, "I think I should be getting more money. It's hard and it's a part of life. But it's not the life I want to live."

Quoted

"How will my husband and I save enough money for all four?"

Santos, On paying for her children's college education

Philly wants to be next

Last month, New York City-area airport workers received a wage increase to $10.10 per hour. Federally contracted workers also received a raise from President Barack Obama.

- According to a report by the National Employment Law Project, 1 out of 5 subcontracted Philadelphia airport workers reported going hungry last year.
- US Airways in Philadelphia recently merged with American. In New York, the airlines agreed to the raise for workers but the raises have yet to be granted, the union said.

Boom. Eighth-grader may be expelled after exploding bottle

An eighth-grade student at the Feltonville School of Arts and Sciences is on track for expulsion after he mixed a potentially harmful cocktail in a soda bottle and exploded it in the school's courtyard Wednesday morning, school officials said.

"It's one of these soda-pop things," School District Spokesman Fernando Gallard said. "They put some sort of a Draino-type chemical and they added some water and some aluminum foil and they mix it up and the chemical reaction makes the soda bottle explode."

Gallard added: "It's something that has been making the rounds on the Internet, showing kids how to do it, and I guess this kid decided that's what he was going to do."

The 14-year-old male was arrested Wednesday and charged with causing and risking catastrophe, reckless endangerment and related offenses, police spokeswoman Officer Tanya Little said.

Gallard said Thursday that the student was suspended and recommended for expulsion. No injuries had been reported in the incident.

He added that leftover materials were found in the boys' bathroom.

TOMMY ROWAN

Potentially harmful

Gallard said the district was thankful no TNT or other heavy-duty explosive was involved.

- He added: "This stuff can hurt people. That chemical is corrosive, and if it gets into somebody's eye, it can really do some harm."

Pennsylvania school. Officials seek motive for stabbing rampage

Pennsylvania officials sought a motive Thursday for what may have driven a 16-year-old student to turn on his classmates with two kitchen knives, stabbing startled victims in the stomach and back, leaving nearly two dozen wounded.

Sophomore Alex Hribal was charged with attempted homicide and aggravated assault using 8-inch steel blades in a stabbing frenzy through the hallways of Franklin Regional High School in Murrysville, near Pittsburgh, on Wednesday.

A security guard and 21 students were wounded before the suspect was tackled by an assistant principal, officials and students said. REUTERS

GM places two engineers on leave

General Motors Co. said it has placed two engineers on paid leave as part of an internal investigation into defective ignition switches linked to 13 deaths and the global recall this year of 2.6 million cars.

Reuters has confirmed that the engineers are Ray DeGiorgio and Gary Altman.

DeGiorgio designed the original switch for the 2003 Saturn Ion that went into production in August 2002. Versions of that switch were used in other GM models, including the Chevrolet Cobalt, that are also part of the global recall. REUTERS

New 'pings' stoke optimism for search

The first four signals were detected by a U.S. Navy "Towed Pinger Locator" (TPL) aboard Australia's Ocean Shield vessel.

A new acoustic signal was detected in the hunt for Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370 on Thursday, further boosting confidence that officials are zeroing in on the missing plane after weeks of searching.

The signal, which could be from the plane's black box recorders, brings to five the number of "pings" detected in recent days within the search area in the Indian Ocean.

The latest was reported by an aircraft picking up transmissions from a listening device buoy laid near the ship on Wednesday.

"Whilst conducting an acoustic search this afternoon a RAAF AP-3C Orion aircraft has detected a possible signal in the vicinity of the Australian Defence Vessel Ocean Shield," Angus Houston, head of the Australian agency coordinating the search, said in a statement.

The data would require further analysis overnight but it showed the potential of being from a "man-made source," he said. REUTERS

Court. Prosecutor tells Oscar Pistorius: 'Your version is a lie'

Prosecutor Gerrie Nel gestures during the trial. / GETTY IMAGES

A South African prosecutor accused Oscar Pistorius on Thursday of lying and altering his story when the Olympic and Paralympic athlete described the night he fatally shot his girlfriend Reeva Steenkamp.

Prosecutor Gerrie Nel, whose reputation as one of South Africa's toughest attorneys has earned him the nickname 'The Pitbull,' cross-examined Pistorius while looking through photographs of the couple's bedroom taken after the shooting.

In a period of fierce questioning, Nel pointed out a series of objects in one picture which ran counter to Pistorius' account of events. In response, the sprinter accused the police of tampering with the scene but Nel ridiculed this suggestion.

"Let's sum up: A policeman moved the two fans, put the duvet on the floor, opened the curtains wider than they should be before the photographs were taken," Nel said.

Quoted

"Your version is so improbable that nobody would ever think it's reasonably possibly true. ... Your version is a lie." Nel

Pistorius says after he shot Steenkamp, he ran out onto the balcony and screamed for help. However, in a picture shown to the court, a duvet and a large stand-up electrical fan clearly block his route to the balcony door. REUTERS

US jobless claims at seven-year low, signal firming the economy

Improvements. There also have been improvements in short-term unemployment rate.

The report joined other positive indicators such as automobile sales and employment data. / GETTY IMAGES

The number of Americans filing new applications for unemployment benefits tumbled last week to the lowest level in nearly seven years, strengthening views of faster job growth.

Thursday's report was the latest sign of momentum in the economy after activity was hobbled by an unusually cold winter.

"The return of warmer temperatures has brought with it better data. There are a number of signs that progress in the jobs market could be accelerating, a positive sign for the broad economy as well," said Jim Baird, chief investment officer at Plante Moran Financial Advisors in Kalamazoo, Mich.

First-time applications

Economists had forecast first-time applications for jobless benefits falling to 320,000 for the week ended April 5.

Initial claims for state unemployment benefits dropped 32,000 to a seasonally adjusted 300,000 for the week ended April 5, the Labor Department said. That was the lowest level since May 2007.

First-quarter growth is expected to have braked sharply from the fourth quarter's annual 2.6 percent pace. REUTERS

NOAH WAY

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

A great truth of politics is that nothing unites people quite like a common enemy. And in our fractious times with Democrats, Republicans, and Independents crossing swords, I think I have found one in Noah. Not the Biblical figure, but rather the Hollywood version who has been riding rampant over unsuspecting moviegoers.

Let me start by saying this is not an attack on the accuracy of this film. I'll let zealots and scholars hash that out. Rather, it is a simple, fair and reasoned assessment, to wit: This is the worst movie ever made.

The story, the characters, the dialogue, the not-so-special effects and, above all, the direction are the cinematic equivalent of an Ebola outbreak. I won't vouch for whether an omnipotent God has ever played at destroying the earth, but our species might well deserve severe punishment for allowing this abysmal film to be produced. If there had been an eighth plague, it would no doubt have involved free screenings of this movie. Should Dante need another circle of hell, this cinematic offering stands at the ready. They dare not show it in theaters with open beams for fear of patrons removing their pants, and fashioning nooses from the fabric. Prisoners shown this film would claw through concrete with their fingernails to escape. If it plays in Crimean theaters, I'm sure the Russians will give the land back to Ukraine which will simultaneously refuse to accept. In short, I've seen better films on the top of month-old flan.

Quoted

Russell Crowe / NIKO TAVERNISE

Again, I'm not raising a single religious objection. Neither will I condemn Russell Crowe or Hermione Granger (aka Emma Watson) for their performances. Both were fine. But in the great culture wars that have gripped our nation and turned politics to a blood sport, I see what President Obama might call a "teachable moment;" a social event so lacking in any redeeming or artistic value, that the faithful and the faithless, the left and right, can be united in their scorn. Thank you, Noah. Now get back on your boat, and please sail away.

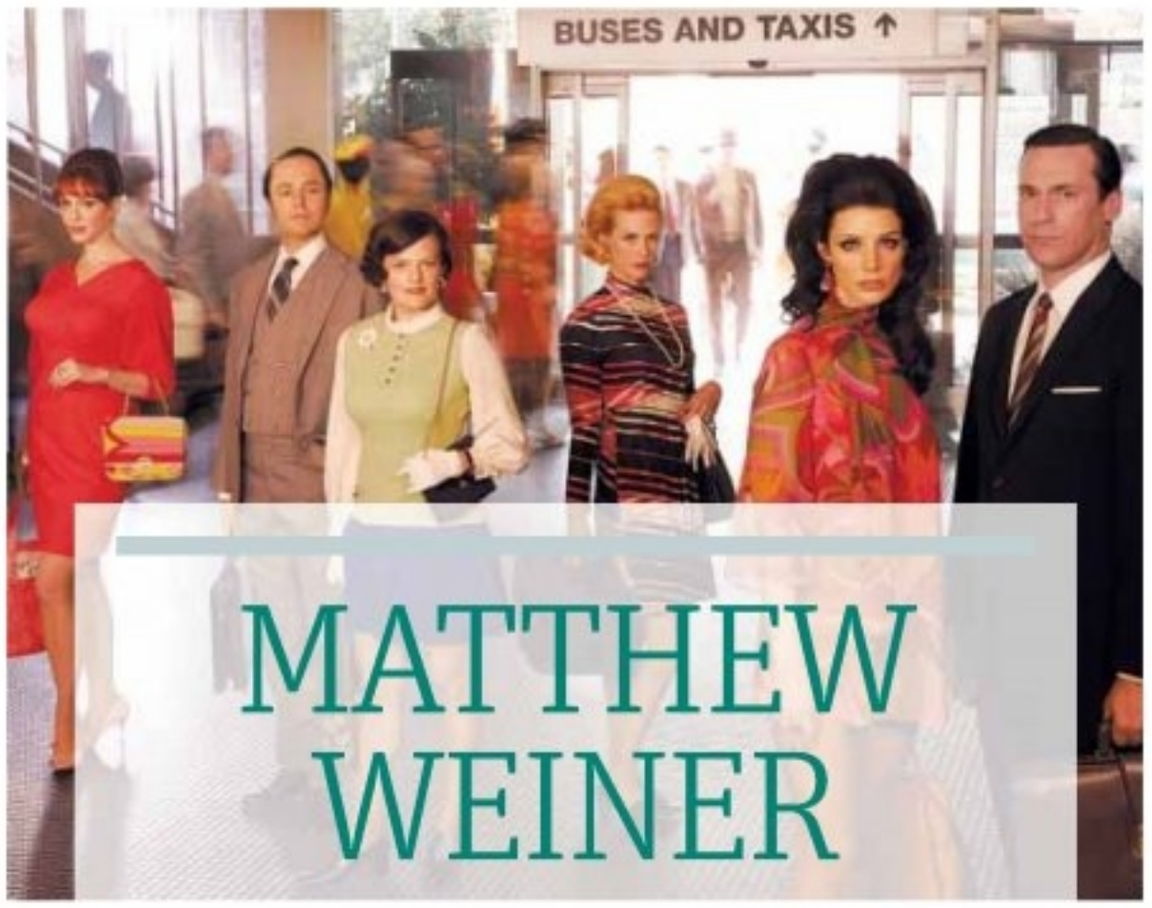
On Don

Hammy goodbyes

What would Jon Hamm and Don talk about if he got a chance to sit down with the mysterious ad exec? "I think we'd talk about life," Hamm says. "I think we'd talk about families, we'd talk about experiences and I'd ask him to please shape up." And what will he do when it's finally over? "I'll have a glass of scotch and I'll sit and stare out the window and someone will take a picture of me," he says with a laugh.



MATTHEW WEINER

The "Mad Men" mastermind is OK leaving his characters to exist in the public consciousness.

THIS IS THE END

The end of the "Mad Men" era is upon us, but don't expect series creator Matthew Weiner to let his guard down about spilling the show now. With the first half of the seventh and final season of the critically acclaimed drama making its debut, Weiner is being as careful as ever. But he did offer us these tidbits.

How have you maintained the production's notorious level of secrecy?
It's been helped a lot by the fact that the critics realize that the audience doesn't want to hear [scoops]. The hardest part is keeping the guest cast quiet. They get really excited and want to tell everyone they're going to be on the show, and you kind of say, "Wait, and I promise we'll help you when the show comes out." I threaten them, but not with violence — with the only leverage that I have, which is being replaced.

MATTHEW WEINER
FRANK OCKENFELS 3/AMC

Have you thought about what happens to the characters after the final episode?
No, I think about where I'm going to leave them and where they'll be in people's minds when it's over. That's the permanent spot. That's the carbonite they're stuck in.

Do you have a sense of what you'll want to make next?
No, I don't. I think I'll know what's on my mind when it's over for a little bit. I haven't taken a vacation in a long time. I made a film in between two of the seasons, which is coming out this summer, after this block of episodes.

How has the show changed your life?
Creatively it's been challenging beyond my wildest dreams. I've gotten to direct, I've gotten to learn how to produce, learn how to deal with business. I've written a lot about it in the show. I've written a lot about the changes I've experienced. It may be in the past, but it's a very thin smokescreen. Although I'm not Don. [Laughs]

Interview

Elisabeth Moss says 'Mad Men' isn't about Peggy

For six seasons, "Mad Men" has chronicled the career of Don Draper, but it's also followed the career of his assistant turned full-fledged Mad Woman, Peggy Olson, played by Elisabeth Moss. Some viewers have even gone so far as to speculate that the whole arc of the series — which began on Peggy's first day on the job, after all — is actually more about Peggy than Don, especially considering the changing cultural landscape of the 1960s.

Moss, for her part, is flattered by the idea, but she's not having it. "I think it's about Don Draper — he's the lead character of the show," she insists. "That would be a very long red herring story."

So, red herrings aside, what does Moss hope the conclusion of the series holds for Peggy? More than simply following in Don Draper's footsteps, that's for sure. "I hope that she finds her own place," she says. "I want her to be working and I want her to be successful at her work, but I think that's because I identify with her, so I kind of want what she wants."

Craig Finn, far left (in both pictures) says he's OK with a more mature Hold Steady. / DANNY CLINCH

A different view of the Hold Steady

Rock. Frontman Craig Finn talks about the rock 'n' roll party train and how we all have to get off sometime.

Over their 10-year career, the Hold Steady have strategically amassed a catalogue of songs often centered on a recurring group of characters. Craig Finn introduced listeners to tragic heroes and fallen friends caught up in the partying lifestyle, formed from the amalgamation of acquaintances and fictional figures. His spoken delivery embraced witty double entendres, juxtaposing modern jargon with scholarly diction as he portrayed the ups and downs of the down-and-outs. And somehow, he always seemed to stay positive.

With "Teeth Dreams" — the band's sixth studio album and the first on their own Washington Square label — hitting stores late last month, Finn's songs seem to have naturally evolved from the post-adolescent party to the inevitable adult hangover. These are cautionary tales and proof that yesterday's kicks become tomorrow's bruises.

"It's definitely the darkest Hold Steady record," says Finn. "While the others had been especially hopeful and maybe positive and optimistic, this one may hold back on that optimism a bit. Writing this record, I wasn't in a particularly bad place or anything, I was just fascinated with anxiety and the idea of mental health and the way we treat it nowadays and the way we deal with our neuroses."

With such a repertoire of decadent characters, Finn says that his narrative had to change and that those wandering from the straight-and-narrow will inevitably fall.

"We started the band 10 years ago, and for the past 10 years I've known a lot of people close to me that have struggled with substance abuse and mental health issues," he says. "I'm 42. When you're 32 you might still be going along and having a good time, but at some point it starts to drag you down. ... [Now] I'm trying to write characters that are a little older. I think that's a challenge, and it always has been. Rock 'n' roll is often about a teenager and a convertible. ... It's 50 and 60 years old now, so it doesn't have to be. Great artists like Bruce Springsteen and Neil Young have written great songs about adults."

If their message seems heavy, their instrumentation is even heavier — any somber sentiment quickly finds solace by leaning against the towering guitar solos that were hinted at before, but are now realized in skyscraping realities. It is still rock 'n' roll, after all.

Quoted

For completists

All Cuaron

The mini-festival also includes an eight-film tribute to Oscar-winning filmmaker Alfonso Cuaron. Viewers can take in everything from the early "A Little Princess" to his breakout hit "Y Tu Mama Tambien" to his Oscar-winning "Gravity." Completists may want to give his 1991 feature debut "Solo Con Tu Pareja" a look, but, unfortunately, it's a dull and dated sex farce. A handsome hero, Tomas Tomas (Daniel Gimenez Cacho), beds two women in the same night, only to have one of them — nurse Silvia Silva (Dobrina Liubomirova) — find out and falsify his HIV status. This strained comedy features obvious humor, as when Tomas is caught naked in a stairwell, and a dumb repetitive joke about suicide by microwave. On the bright side, Cuaron shows his promise as a visual filmmaker with some nifty camerawork.

Festivals. The Philadelphia Film Society's Spring Showcase boasts newbies and oldies.

See it first

Jesse Eisenberg and Mia Wasikowska go on an awkward date in "The Double." / MAGNOLIA PICTURES

During the coming week, the Philadelphia Film Society's Spring Showcase offers casual moviegoers and cinephiles alike the chance to sneak a peek at some forthcoming fare, including "Belle," a lavish-looking costume drama about race and class in 17th-century England, and "The Double," Richard Ayoade's comedy about a man (Jesse Eisenberg) and his encounters with his doppelganger.

Over the weekend, viewers can take in an eclectic mix of cult films. One of the highlights is "Club Sandwich," from "Duck Season" writer/director Fernando Eimbcke — a poignant coming-of-age story told in the filmmaker's patented style of long takes and subtle epiphanies. Paloma (Maria Renee Prudencio) takes an off-season vacation with her teenage son, Hector (Lucio Gimenez Cacho). They are very close, but when Hector meets Jazmin (Danae Reynaud Romero), she offers him a different kind of intimacy. "Club Sandwich" is a small, unassuming film, but it has a satisfying payoff.

Michel Gondry's enchanting "Mood Indigo" chronicles the playful romance between Colin (Romain Duris) and Chloe (Audrey Tautou) before the latter develops a unique illness: a water lily on her right lung. The film boasts witty animated visuals and great inventive gags. There are sublime moments (a floating cloud car) and silly ones (a go-cart race in a church) before the whimsy turns serious. "Mood Indigo" weakens as Chloe does, but it is bolstered by Duris' aplomb as a physical comedian.

The late night feature "Moebius," by South Korean filmmaker Kim Ki-duk, is a dare for even the most jaded viewers. Like his excellent "3-Iron," this new drama has no dialogue. But that is not what makes it challenging. "Moebius" concerns a mother (Lee Eun-woo) who castrates her son (Seo Young-joo) as a way of punishing her cheating husband (Cho Jae-hyun). That's the least of its transgressions. See it at your own risk.

'Draft Day'

Director: Ivan Reitman

Stars: Kevin Costner, Jennifer Garner

Rating: PG-13

Denis Leary gets in Kevin Costner's face in "Draft Day." / DALE ROBINETTE

How Costner almost got his groove back

Sports drama. The one-time biggest movie star in the world is on somewhat sure footing in "Draft Day."

The Kevin Costner Comeback Machine has had a bumpy ride. Costner was once an A-list star destroyed by hubris, namely the insistence that he was a movie hero of towering gravitas. In truth he's a scene-stealing supporting player and wry romantic-comedy lead.

As far as returns to the lead go, "Draft Day" is more his speed than "3 Days to Kill," a wreck that left him in the lurch. This is a low-key dramedy about a high-test day, in which his Sonny Weaver Jr., the much-doubted GM of the Cleveland Browns, has to get his groove back.

The flailing footballers need a big get during the titular day to pull them out of a valley, and Sonny has struck a probably short-sighted deal for first pick. But will he pick the possibly over-hyped kid whose agent is played by Sean Combs? Or will it be the underdog (Chadwick Boseman) who may have the actual goods?

Of course, Sonny is an underdog too. "Draft Day" piles on its hero, whose father has just died, who is undermined by everyone, who has just discovered he knocked up the staffer he's secretly banging (Jennifer Garner). In fact, the film might as well be about Costner. It's almost perfect that "3 Days to Kill" was such a wash; it adds to how much both Sonny and he have on the line.

Luckily, "Draft Day" is one of those films that seems lackadaisical and pleasant, with familiar gags involving bumbling interns, an instantly abandoned exploration of gender politics and a generally shaggy plot — until it suddenly whips out a killer ending. The last half hour kicks up several gears so that Sonny/Costner can bust out their chops.

Suddenly we're reminded of the Costner of old: not the one who thought of himself as a savior in bloated adventures and epics, but the cocksure badass of "Bull Durham" and the like — the type of role that should have filled out his whole career.

The mirror has several scary faces

Katee Sackhoff is scared by a little old scary mirror in "Oculus." / JOHN ESTES

Horror. "Oculus" tries to milk frights out of furniture and some impressive filmmaking.

In the new horror film "Oculus," willowy, Scottish geek goddess Karen Gillan ("Doctor Who") and hunky, Aussie soap star Brenton Thwaites star as siblings who come back to the home where their parents (Katee Sackhoff and Rory Cochrane) died 11 years prior. Gillan's Kaylie believes the events of that hellish night happened because Mom and Dad were possessed by this large, antique mirror that hung in the old man's office. With the help of computers and cameras, she's determined to catch the mirror in the supernatural act.

Expanding on a 2005 short, co-writer/director Mike Flanagan provides some fluid camerawork (as though the camera operator was one of the ghosts) and establishes a well laid-out narrative. The first half has Kaylie and Tim each creating convincing arguments as they debate whether or not they saw what they really saw. Of course, all that goes out the window in the second half, when the weird stuff starts happening and they find themselves having to survive all over again.

Perhaps the most impressive thing is how "Oculus" never devolves into utter ridiculousness. Thanks to Flanagan and Jeff Howard's straight-faced script the movie doesn't become yet another soulless haunted house movie. By the time it gets to its climactic twist, you realize just how heartbreaking a horror show "Oculus" truly is.

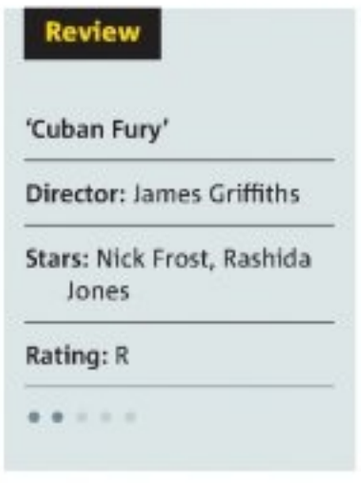
Rom-com. In 'Cuban Fury,' Nick Frost should be dancing (more)

Nick Frost busts a move on Chris O'Dowd in "Cuban Fury." ENTERTAINMENT ONE



Let's get this out of the way: "Cuban Fury" is not an original. It's not even terribly inspired. It's a paint-by-numbers underdog rom-com in which lumpy sad sack Bruce (Nick Frost) tries to win the heart of a woman (Rashida Jones) who looks like Rashida Jones by tapping into his long-dormant passion for salsa hoofing.

And yet it's reasonably likable despite itself — or rather because of who's in it and because it's taken two things that don't go together and put them together anyway: dry English wit and dancing. Still, it could stand more dancing. There's a lot of training but only one climactic competition. Meanwhile it's practically impossible to tell if Frost has moves, as he's obscured (or aided) by overemphatic editing. Frost is winning, though. Without him, "Cuban Fury" would only have nice music. Bigger but not better

Iko Uwais and Cecep Arif Rahman go at it with hooks in "The Raid 2." / SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Martial arts.
"Raid 2" has more story than the first, but that's not a good thing.

Genre movies, especially ones with lots of fighting, have always had the same problem: The viewer gets a handful of stellar, awe-inspiring set pieces surrounded by thumb-twiddling plot. It turns out that fat was there for a reason. The Indonesian action spectacular "The Raid: Redemption" removed them, meaning it was one smackdown after another after another, for nearly two hours. The result was an action lover's dream — in theory. In practice it was exhausting, even boring. (Though it was great if watched in shifts.)

The inevitable sequel, "The Raid 2" — which features no raids — goes more traditional. This one has a bona fide plot — a needlessly complicated, rarely involving one featuring characters defined by a single trait, even if that trait is simply "belligerent." (One is named "Baseball Bat Man"; another, "Hammer Girl." She's the token female fighter, which is one more than the first.) The plot is gang boilerplate, something about the slimy scion (Arifin Putra) of one organization getting in bed with another.

And here's the problem (or one of them): Director Gareth Evans goes too far with plot when his true directorial gift is for escalating insanity. His best work isn't the first "Raid" but rather his contribution to "V/H/S 2," where he keeps ramping things up in increasingly loopy, horrifying ways. "The Raid 2," meanwhile, keeps stopping and starting, introducing a melange of brutality then hitting the brakes just when a lather had been worked up. It would be tolerable at a reasonable length, but Evans insists on being a different kind of exhausting, jerking us hither and thither between tedious exposition and knock-down, drag-out hurtin' for a punishing two and a half hours.

Apparently "The Raid 2" was the story Evans wanted to tell before budget constraints tied him down to a single location. He hit on his great idea by accident, when he meant to do his hubristic, supersized sophomore slump first. Of course there's pockets of isolated greatness, and Evans, a Welshman who's found a hotbed of untapped buttkickers in Indonesia, still knows how to stage an assault. He has no idea how to stage two people talking, which is what devours half the running time. At least it is peppered with highlights that will soon hit YouTube, where they belong.

Drama. The latest from the Romanian New Wave is a winner

Like Joan Crawford in "Mildred Pierce," Cornelia (Luminita Gheorghiu), the centerpiece of the Romanian New Wave number "Child's Pose," will do anything to help her spawn, namely Barbu (Bogdan Dumitrache). Good thing too, because in the film's first 15 minutes it's revealed he accidentally ran over a boy who was running across a highway.

Against the wishes of police, the slain child's working-class family and Barbu himself, Cornelia throws herself into the fray. She wants to use her connections to keep her only son out of jail. She'll even go down questionable routes, including asking the other driver (Vlad Ivanov, the great, reliable scene stealer of modern Romanian cinema) to change his statement.

The first half marries naturalism to a satirical bent that mostly targets the upper class, with Cornelia embodying how money and power can make anything go away. But at least here, money and power don't make everything go away, and the second half willingly storms into less assured places. What starts off as broad melodrama becomes, for lack of a better term, more "real," with Cornelia becoming more and more human.

'Rio 2' doesn't shine

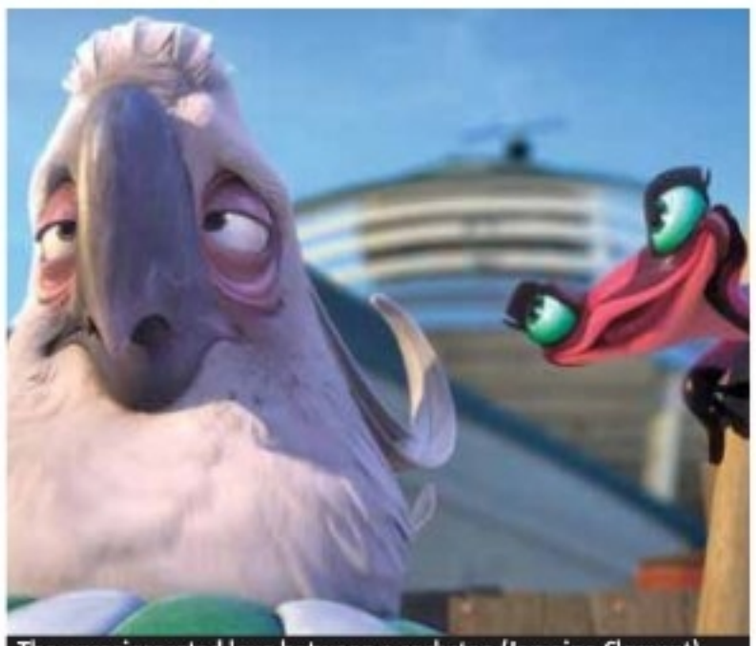
Cartoon. The sequel to a movie that made lots of money only entertains about twice.

Pretty and almost entirely vacant, the sequel to the cash-gobbler "Rio" — from 20th Century Fox's terminally underwhelming Blue Sky Studios ("Ice Age") — hangs back with literal lovebirds. Endangered blue macaws Blu (the stammering voice of Jesse Eisenberg) and Jewel (Anne Hathaway) fly deep into the dangerous Amazon. There, they replay "Meet the Parents," with Andy Garcia voicing Jewel's intimidating paterfamilias, who doesn't take kindly to Blu's nebbishy, city-raised ways.

Blu's fumbles for acceptance from the virile jungle folk are stock and thumb-twiddling, no less because Eisenberg is on nervous autopilot. Even the business about a mean developer seeking to chop down parts of the Amazon basin feels less like a token lesson than just a way to burn screentime.

What does "Rio 2" even want to be? Adults assume these monstrosities will placate them a little bit, namely with jokes that may or may not go over the heads of their pint-sized demographic. Every now and then "Rio 2" remembers to do this. The film peaks early via a mock-ballad crooned by a poisonous frog (Kristin Chenoweth) to the cockatoo (Jemaine Clement) she loves but cannot touch. Later comes a montage concerning talent show auditions for jungle critters, some of whom become food for other critters. These are but the few times "Rio 2" feels genuinely eager to please and not simply money-hungry.



The unreciprocated love between a cockatoo (Jemaine Clement) and a poisonous frog (Kristin Chenoweth) is one of the only amusing bits in "Rio 2." / BLUE SKY STUDIOS

Follow a real anti-hero

Crime comedy. Jude Law tears into his angriest, funniest role yet in "Dom Hemingway."

Demian Bichir, Jude Law and Richard E. Grant get down in "Dom Hemingway." / FOX SEARCHLIGHT

"Dom Hemingway" has a great lead character and it knows it. Dom Hemingway (Jude Law) is a mortmouthed gangster introduced launching into a florid monologue that's largely an ode to his manstick. He's about to get out of a lengthy sentence, which he served for not ratting out his boss (Demian Bichir). For this, Dom expects a great reward — perhaps greater than he deserves.

Law has always excelled at a micro-managed style of comedy; please think of his eventually malfunctioning corporate robot in "I Heart Huckabees," whose every lightning fast tic seems painstakingly pre-planned. He does the same here. When Dom gets going, he leans forward into close-talker uncomfortability, as though he wanted to leap out of his body.

Honestly, you don't want to give this guy too much to do, and writer-director Richard Shepard ("The Matador") knows it. He tasks him with a handful of amusing misadventures, including a bit where he tries to open a new-fangled electronic safe — a deed he insists on doing only after a few pints. Shepard sporadically dangles an estranged daughter (Emilia Clarke) in front of him. But these more sentimental bits are both thumb-twiddlers and not dominant enough to ruin the fun.

Drama. Nicolas Cage goes understated but remains pretty nuts

It's not always easy to remember that Nicolas Cage — an entertaining ham who's recently been stuck in trash — is a real actor, capable of nuance, introspection and other qualities generally associated with "fine acting." "Joe," the latest from David Gordon Green, is his most understated work in ages. He plays a Texas ex-con who runs a ramshackle business poisoning trees. Into his midst comes Gary (Tye Sheridan), a hard-scrapple teenager looking for work. His father is a professional drunk who beats him and steals his winnings. Gary is looking for a new father figure, and Joe may be it.

But Joe isn't much of a father figure, and Cage doesn't play him that way. A hard-livin' crank, he lets his hair-trigger temper lead him to bouts of self-destruction. He's too busy getting tanked, tending to assassination attempts and flipping out on cops who pull him over for a Breathalyzer. Cage balances moments of grace with classic Nic Cage freak outs, while Green further proves that his transition from indie king ("George Washington") to stoner comedies ("Pineapple Express") and back again was a necessary trajectory in the search for his real self.

Ample fun with Ample Hills Creamery

On a little corner shop in Brooklyn, magic happens. That's where husband-and-wife team Brian Smith and Jackie Cuscuna create crave-worthy flavors like Nanatella, Coconut Fudge and Mexican Hot Chocolate at their ice cream shop, Ample Hills Creamery. Now you can recreate the magic at home with aid from their first cookbook, "Ample Hills Creamery: Secrets and Stories from Brooklyn's Favorite Ice Cream Shop." We spoke with Cuscuna, who owns and operates the business with Smith (and is also a full-time teacher!). With the new book, and a second shop opening next month, life is sweet for this pair.

Making ice cream seems so intimidating! Is it really hard to do?
No, it's really not. The cool thing about ice cream is that you can experiment — add a little more, take a little away. It's not as intense as, say, baking would be; some baked goods are more time-sensitive and you have to be very precise with ingredients. We just made a recipe from the book the other day with our kids. It was just like, "What do you think it needs?" They're like, "I think needs a little bit more cinnamon." "OK, add a little more." It's flexible. You can taste it prior to putting it in the ice cream maker. You can't taste a cake before [it's done].

What's your most popular flavor at the shop?
Salted Crack Caramel. I was making cones last week at the shop and I had the book with me, and somebody peeked in and said, "Is that the book? Is the crack recipe in there?" I think the Pep-Permint patty flavor is also really amazing because it's made with homemade peppermint patties. It's a huge crowd pleaser and everyone loves it.

Cuscuna is at Ample Hills every day after 4 p.m. (when her kids get out of school). / LUCY SCHAEFFER

You create such unique flavors. Do you think people are bored with vanilla, chocolate and strawberry?
I don't think people are necessarily bored with them. I think certain people like simplistic flavors and they don't want a lot of stuff in their ice cream. That I get, I just think that we have so much fun with our flavors, just from creating and naming them and involving the public. Part of it is just not taking ourselves too seriously and trying to make, like, the most artisanal ice cream with goat cheese and sour cherries. [We're] more like, "What do we like to eat? What do our kids like to eat? How can we make a cool flavor combination that everyone would like?"

That's cool that the public gets a say.
We do that a lot. We did a "Walking Dead" Georgia On My Brain, which is blood peach puree, and there's a splash of bourbon in there.

Running an ice cream shop sounds like it'd be all fun all the time. What's not fun about it?
You would think it's all fun and games, owning an ice cream shop with two kids, but having them want ice cream all the time can be difficult. We're trying to keep them involved in it with us, but at the same time we have to limit their intake. I'm a teacher as well, so [everything] combined is really intense.

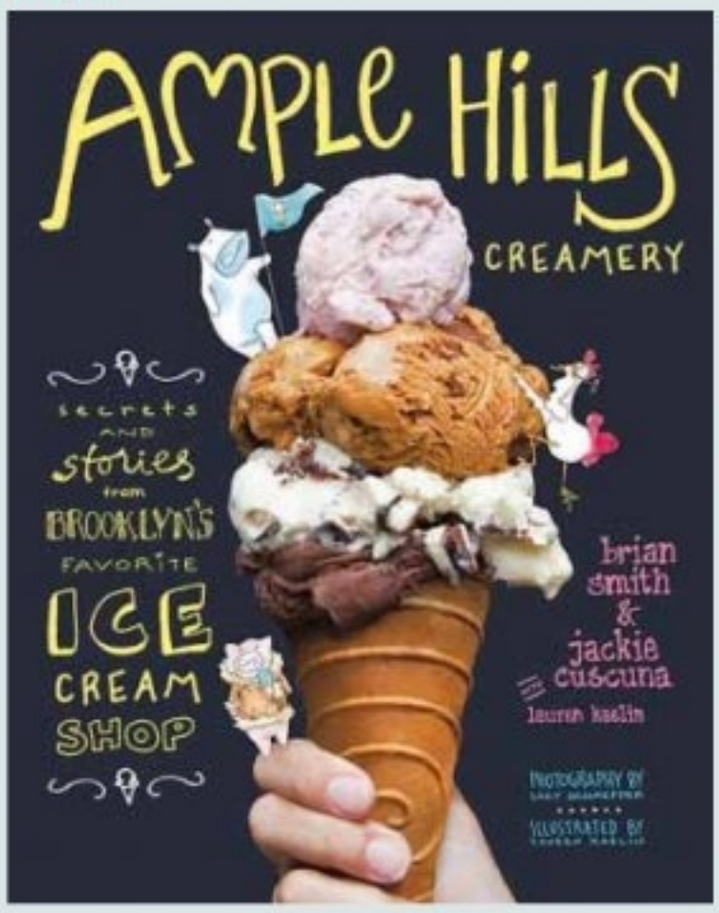
Try it



What recipes from your book would work best for a beginner?

I think some of the flavors that don't need to cooked. I think Bananamon [banana cinnamon] is one of the easier ones because you're not using egg yolks in it, and so therefore you don't need to cook it to pasteurize it. You just need a blender and an ice cream maker.

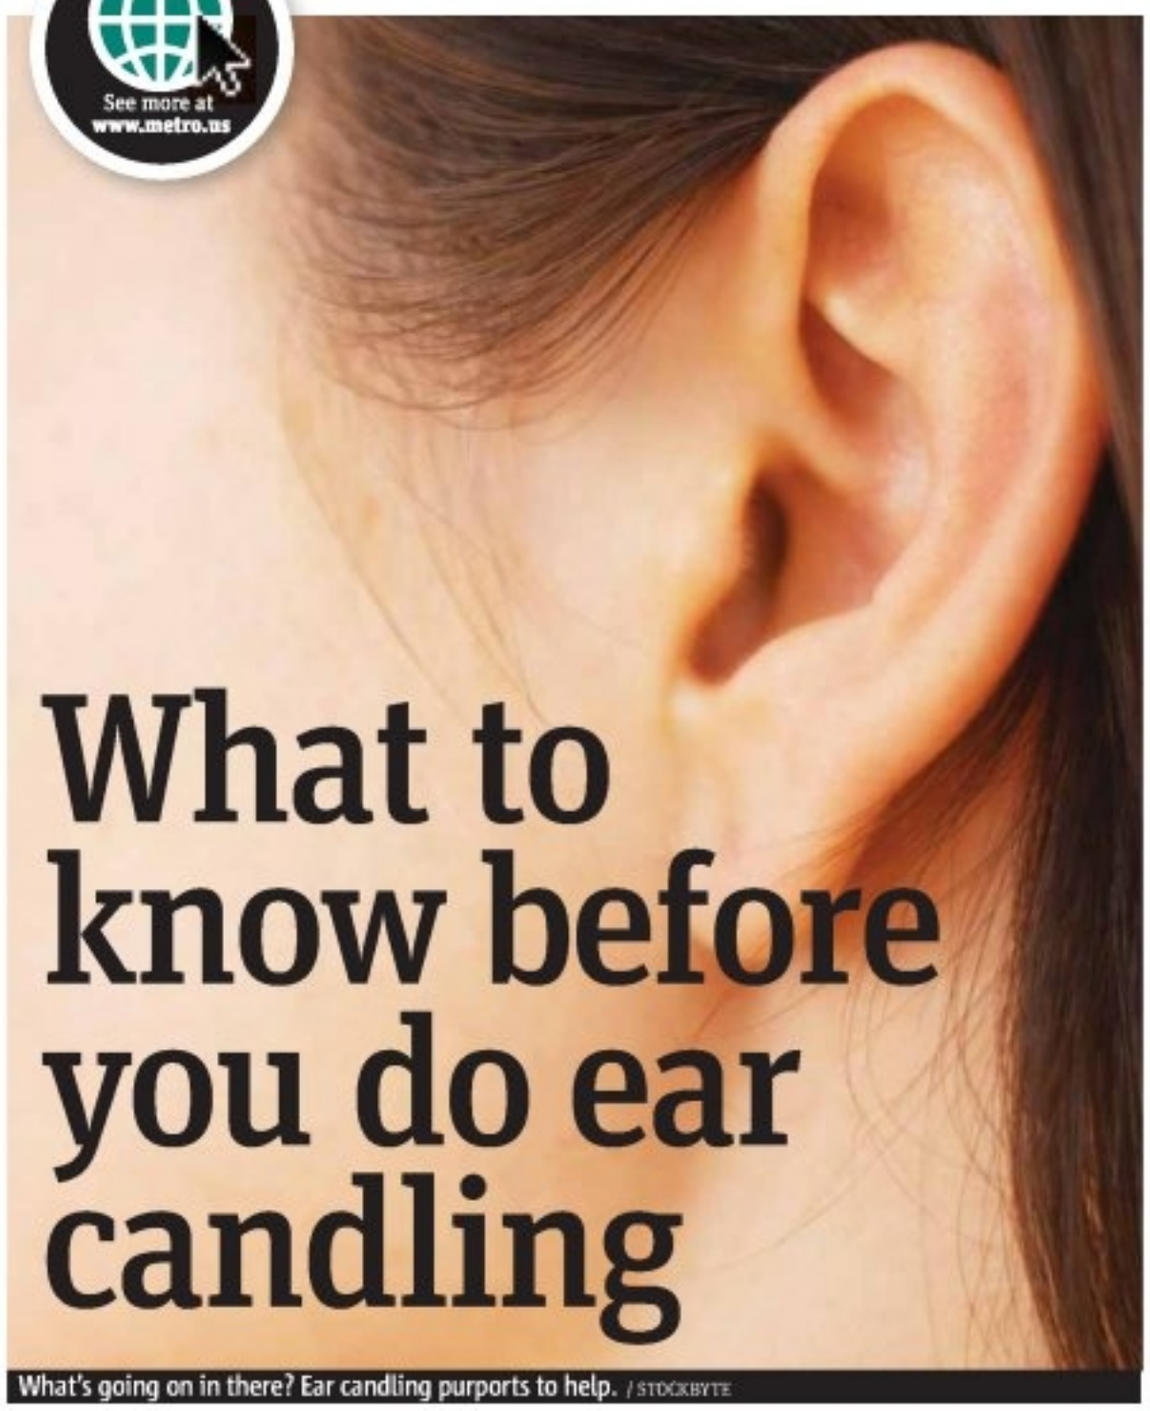
Health. Take a closer look at this controversial procedure.



What to know before you do ear candling

What's going on in there? Ear candling purports to help. / STOCKBYTE

Ear candling is a contentious, but popular alternative therapy, reputed to safely clear wax and debris from the ear canal and help conditions such as ear aches, infections, headaches and sinus pressure. It is thought to have originated in biblical times. But the treatment has detractors, especially in the medical profession, with some viewing it as a bogus, unproven alternative therapy.

"The process involves creating a negative pressure, which presumably sucks out the wax," says Dr. David Schessel, an ear, nose and throat specialist at Long Island's Stony Brook Medical Center. "There have been some evaluations of its efficacy: One showed no vacuum was created, another found that the debris collected wasn't from the ear, but from combustion and the candle. I wouldn't recommend it."

Still, many spas offer the service, and kits are available for in-home use. Maria Deslandes, owner of Boston's Southwest Day Spa, introduced ear candling eight years ago after she tried it herself.

"I used to have problems with background noise," says Deslandes. "If someone was talking and there was a noise in the background, I couldn't hear what they were saying. I had three ear candling sessions and afterward I could hear everything clearly," she recalls. "I flew to Brazil a while ago and came back feeling very congested. After two sessions, it was gone. I have one client who suffered from terrible ringing in his ears and after three sessions it was significantly improved. It's a wonderful treatment."

Deslandes says ear candling, which takes about 15 minutes per ear and is performed with the patient lying down on a massage table, is soothing, too. "Most people say they find it very relaxing."

Dr. Schessel not only questions its efficacy, though, but its safety too.

"Pushing something into the ear canal has the potential to do damage," he says. "Most people think of earwax as dirt, something to be gotten out. Wax is natural and it has a purpose. It waterproofs the ear and kills bacteria. The ear is a self-cleaning structure."

Light my fire

How it works

A candle is inserted gently into the ear canal and lit. Then the person lies without moving for 10-15 minutes. It is extinguished and the technician removes it.

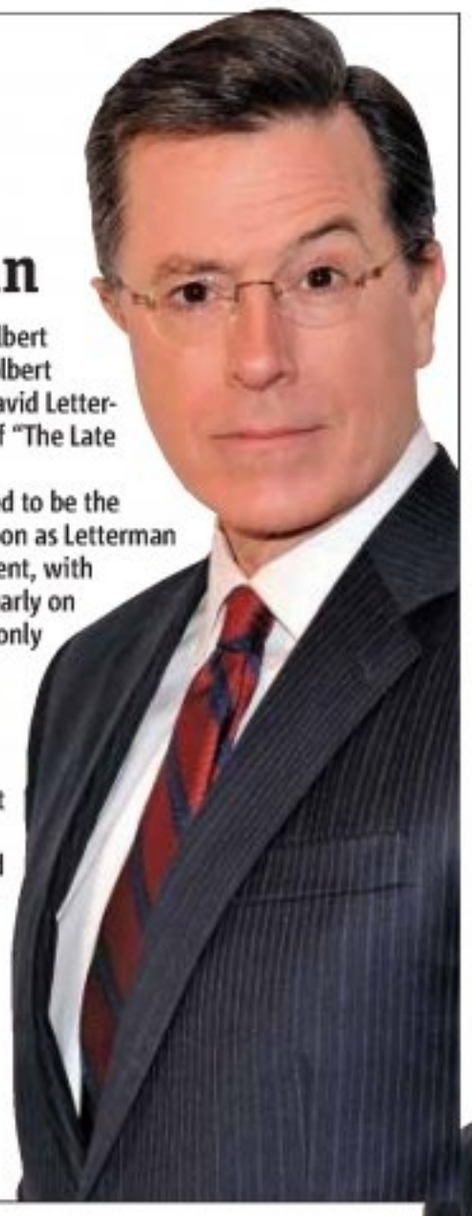
Colbert to take over for Letterman



It's official: Stephen Colbert will be leaving "The Colbert Report" to take over David Letterman's old gig as host of "The Late Show" at CBS.

Colbert was rumored to be the top choice almost as soon as Letterman announced his retirement, with Mashable suggesting early on it would be him. After only one week of speculation (and presumably behind-the-scenes negotiations), CBS announced that Colbert would be taking over the show, and that he'd been signed to a five-year agreement.

Festivals. Celebrities at Coachella

Ah, Coachella. The annual music fest — which is being held this weekend in Palm Springs, Calif. — is probably now best known for the celebrity attendees (and ridiculous outfits) than the actual music (seriously, do YOU know who is playing this weekend?). So in honor of the famed bacchanalian fest, we're taking a look back at the rich and famous who have braved the heat, fedoras, and cut-offs in years past.

Depp is hiding bad behavior from Heard

JOHNNY DEPP
CHINAFOTOPRESS

Johnny Depp's engagement to Amber Heard seems to have calmed his wild ways, but sources close to the "Pirates of the Caribbean" star are worried he hasn't actually cleaned up his act and is instead hiding his more reckless behavior from her, according to Radar Online. "Johnny was so wild for so long, and it's hard to believe that Amber has straightened him out completely. Last year he was partying with six chicks and getting turned away from bars. This year he's quietly going to dinner with Amber," a source says. "Johnny always seemed like he was having a great time out partying, and it wasn't just because a lot of women were around. People are afraid that he's hiding his partying to be a good and upstanding guy for Amber."

Re: Metro, April 9. I have two simple points:

1 Under the poor excuse for celebrity gossip, this woman wants to remind both Dom Nader and Miranda Kerr that slutty isn't sexy. This type of magazine cover [for GQ] leads to extremely premature sexualization, not to mention body issues and eating disorders. This is not a positive or healthy image for a young girl to be looking at. How about someone with enough class and grace to wear clothes and STILL look good (and actually look sexy instead of like a happy hooker)! P.S. Nader has to puff his lips out a little more. I can almost see the words "I'm trying to look like I'm easy" falling out of Kerr's mouth.

2 Second, under the Style section, wouldn't your pores be processing bad things by letting them leak out of your body on purpose? Isn't anything you put in your body, even extremely healthy food, food nonetheless? I mean, we s— out apples and tofu as much as milkshakes and cake. Why wouldn't our pores process out "bad things" just like they process out sweat, alcohol and everything in between?

Union host Real Salk Lake

With baseball back in town, it's easy to forget the MLS season is in full swing as well. The 1-3-1 Union look to earn victory No. 2 against Real Salt Lake (2-0-3) in a 4 p.m. match in PPL Park on Saturday. Leo Fernandes leads Philadelphia offensively early in the year, with two goals and an assist so far.

Phillies need to clean things up

MLB. The Phillies defense has completely collapsed, and it is costing them dearly.

Ryne Sandberg likes nothing more than sound, fundamental baseball.

He must hate watching the team he manages, then.

The Phillies, in a three-game stretch spanning from Sunday against the Cubs through the first two games at home against the Brewers, have allowed 10 unearned runs.

That's right, 10 — six of which came from errors. And the Phillies have committed plenty of those as well, leading the National League with nine through Thursday afternoon.

"We definitely have to tighten that up," Sandberg said. "We have to work at it; we will talk about it. Some of those plays are routine, and we have to make the routine plays."

Though it isn't reflected on the field of play, the Phillies players know they have to clean it up on the field. But this is the big leagues, and it's easier said than done.

"We just have to bear down and make a couple plays," Phillies outfielder Domonic Brown said, "that's really it. It changes the ball game, those plays. We have to keep our head up and keep battling."

Prior to Thursday's season finale against the Brewers (who have outscored the Phillies 19-8 in the first two games of the series), Sandberg made sure the grounds crew had the field ready early. His team needed some extra practice.

But Sandberg is optimistic the hard work will pay off in the long run.

"That's possibly early-season stuff that we're still in the process of ironing out," he said.

Fifth starter needed

Pettibone likely to start Saturday

The Phillies will need a fifth starter for the first time Saturday, and after David Buchanan tossed 93 pitches in Lehigh Valley on Tuesday, all but eliminating him from consideration, all eyes look to be on Jonathan Pettibone to take the mound.

Pettibone has been out since spring training with shoulder soreness but is feeling better and has big league experience to fall back on.

He made 18 starts for the Phillies last season, posting a 4.04 ERA.

If Pettibone does get called up, it will likely only be for two starts. Cole Hamels is expected to return around April 22. METRO

CLOSER CAROUSEL BEGINS

We are not even two weeks into the 2014 baseball season, and a fistful of bullpens are already in disarray. Show us your surprised face. The ever-elusive chase for saves in fantasy leagues is raging, with owners who didn't overpay on draft day reaping rewards. Digesting and projecting these situations early on will ensure health in the category all year.

Old is new again on the closer circuit as Francisco Rodriguez and Jose Valverde are names to pick up. / GETTY IMAGES

Brewing K-Rod

Heading into the spring, Jim Henderson was penciled in as the Brewers' closer. But that's why they play the games. Henderson struggled so badly that Francisco Rodriguez got the call on Opening Day and hasn't looked back. Through Wednesday, he hadn't allowed a run while Henderson is scuffling in a middle relief role.

Storm coming

Matt Lindstrom surprisingly beat out Nate Jones for the closer's gig with the White Sox, sending owners scurrying to scoop him up. Don't take the bait. Lindstrom, 34, can't get lefties out and has given up six hits in three innings with one blown save already. Jones (hip) is the player to stash on injured lists, while flamethrowing youngster Maikel Cleto is a name to watch.

V is for victory

Mets closer Bobby Parnell is out for the year following Tommy John surgery, opening the door for a blast from the past. Jose Valverde is 36, but is just two seasons removed from a 35-save campaign and is off to a hot start this year with six strikeouts and zero runs allowed through 4 1/3 innings.

Thompson bright spot for struggling Sixers

NBA. Hollis Thompson has proven he belongs on an NBA roster this season.

Thompson is averaging over 10 points per game in April. / GETTY IMAGES

Lost in the debris of a 17-61 season has been the steady improvement of Hollis Thompson.

In fact, Thompson may have stamped his place on the 76ers' roster for next season. Time will tell, but Thompson has been one of their most improved players, especially over the past 10 games.

Thompson knocked down six 3-pointers on his way to a career-high 18 points in a recent loss to the Nets. Through 68 games, Thompson is 64-for-157, 40.8 percent from beyond the arc.

Any NBA team would surely want a player on its roster with these types of numbers.

"When I'm on the court competing, I'm not thinking about shooting threes," Thompson said. "I'm out there playing and trying to do whatever I can to help the Sixers win. If the situation presents itself, then I'll shoot them."

Thompson signed as a free agent with the Sixers after going undrafted in 2012. Following one season in the NBA Development League, Thompson earned a spot on the Sixers. And he's determined to keep it.

If he keeps hitting 3-pointers at this pace, it will be hard for the Sixers not to retain him.

"I feel like I just need to play hard, do what the coaches need and things will take care of themselves," Thompson said. "I don't really think about next year or beyond because I need to stay focused. That's the most important thing right now. If I do that, then good things will hopefully happen."

Thompson's work ethic will always continue. He's usually the first player to arrive at practice and at games.

"I was the last guy to make the roster as an undrafted free agent," Thompson said. "It's about hard work. That got me here. I feel like extra work will always pay off."

NBA. 76ers continue road trip in Memphis, look for more defense

Elliot Williams and the Sixers defense allow too many points. / GETTY IMAGES

The 76ers, since their losing streak ended back on March 29, have shown new life offensively.

They have shot the ball well and have found themselves in position to contend in many more games than they had before.

Michael Carter-Williams continued his campaign to win Rookie of the Year with 19 points, nine rebounds and eight assists in a loss at Toronto Wednesday and is helping the team routinely surpass the 100-point margin.

"I'm trying to learn throughout the season," Carter-Williams said on the team's website. "I think I have improved and so has the team. I've tried to be more of a leader and be more assertive — play calling and being a leader."

Unfortunately, the team is 1-4 since the streak ended, allowing an average of 111.6 points per game on defense.

The Sixers have a chance to put the defense and offense together to get a tough win out West on Friday at 8 p.m. in Memphis. EVAN MACY

Manziel No. 1?

Staubach: Manziel should be Texans' top pick

Roger Staubach thinks his home town team should take Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel with the No. 1 pick.

"I just think there's something about this kid — the quickness," Staubach told NFL Network. "Today in the league, the quarterbacks can fly. We weren't allowed to do that. I think Manziel is going to be a valuable player in the NFL."

The Texans are in need of a quarterback, but have a slew of other needs to think about as well. METRO

Giants quarterback Eli Manning went under the knife Thursday, but there's no reason for Eagles fans to get excited. He had an ankle debridement to clean out scar tissue from a high ankle sprain he suffered last season, a minor procedure. METRO

A CHAMPIONSHIP-LEVEL EXPERIENCE

"The atmosphere at a Soul game is electric and we are Back 2 Back Conference Champions including being the winningest professional team in the city the past two years"
– Ron Jaworski, Soul Owner

By Ron Jaworski, owner Philadelphia Soul

"Watching the Soul reminds me of my days with the Rams with all the high-scoring action! It's no coincidence that my team leader, Kurt Warner, cut his teeth in the Arena Football League. I can't wait to get to a Soul game this year, it's a great football experience!"
- Dick Vermeil

I have been around the game of football for most of my life. No, Arena Football is not the NFL, but these guys on our team are some of the most talented football players in the world! When you jam some of the best athletes in the world onto a 50-yard football field surrounded by padded walls, you get a sports experience unlike anything you have ever seen.

It's an intense brand of football. The passion of our players transfers directly to our fans in the arena. When the action on the field stops, our promotions teams keep the energy in the building for the entire two and a half hours you are there. You will be entertained from the moment you enter the Wells Fargo Center until the time you leave and the experience is perfect for the entire family.

Our 9-game home schedule begins on April 19. The night and entire season is jammed with excitement. At the opener, we will honor Philadelphia Area High School Champions as we unveil our 2013 Conference Championship Banner, it is $1 Hot Dog Night, there is a magnet schedule giveaway thanks to Bradford White Water Heaters and one fan will win an 80" HDTV courtesy of Judge Unified Communications at the game while our team will look to kick some butt on the field!

Family 4 Packs for the game (and every game) are as low as $68 and include 4 tickets, hot dogs, sodas and popcorns.

3-Game Mini Packs are just $89 and include a ticket to 3 games this season, a food voucher for each game (hot dog, soda and popcorn) and a bobble head doll (Soulman or Tiger Jones).

For the entire 2014 promotional schedule or to order your tickets now, call 888-789-SOUL or go to www.PhiladelphiaSoul.com
